Fresh Glory, Says Baker.

"The spiritual progress of America is shown by our addition of fresh glory to this day set apart to memoralize the Nation's heroic dead. There is no division of its ancient significance, but fresh meaning is added by those who have died on foreign soil to perpetuate the libertles for which their ancestors gave their lives at home.

Acting Secretary of State Polk said: "The people may well pause today and pay their meed of tribute to the nation's dead."

"Never in the annals of the world has there been more fitting occasion for a people to make acknowledgment, in every home, in every city and hamlet, of the supreme sacrifice of those who went forth to serve their country in a cause whose justice none may challenge.

"Inspired by justice and liberty, in patriotism of the highest, the best of the American people joined in common defense of a sacred cause and contributed toward the consummation of ultimate victory over a great brute force that threatened the world and civilization. To those heroes who now lie on foreign land and to all those who fell in that cause, as well as to those who served their country in the past, the nation today bows in solemn tribute."

Today we commemorate not only as a nation this holy day of memory, but our memorial includes the valleys of France, the fields of Flanders, the guins of Belgium, and reaches out in a network of sympathy that stretches around the world.

WABASH, Ind., May 30 .- "I will remember it as long as I live," remarked Uncle Jack Higgins, 101 years old, after a fifteen-minute flight in an airplane at the service aviation field here vesterday. A large crowd witnessed the ascent of the oldest man in northern Indiana. He was laughing when he stepped in the machine, saying he always cherished an ambition to fly.

When he alighted he said the flight made him hungry, and that it was little different from riding in a boat. He said to Edward Bridges, a truck manufacturer, through whose courtesy the trip was made:
